Art is Grand - Free Art is Sublime

I love the internet. Because of this crazy web, courtesy of Mr. Al Gore ;), we can connect, re-connect, and support each other in ways we couldn't just a few short years ago.

We've had give-aways here at Get in the Car for face masks, books, purses, lip gloss, and jewelry. We've sold diamonds and turned over the proceeds to Habitat for Humanity. All of this is possible because of the great network we have, and all we have to do is turn on our computer. Now, I'd love for you to turn your attention to a talented Pacific Northwest Artist, Katie Berggren.

Please visit her site. Not only is she a true talent, she's a mother, and she even designed the web page for Muddy H2O, the people who gave several of you free chocolate and French clay face masks!

As an incentive to toddle on over and peruse her great work, which celebrates womanhood and is affordable, she is giving away TWELVE FREE ART CARDS to readers of this here blog. I love her work, because she celebrates motherhood in a unique way, and even though I live in one of those artsy southwest towns, I haven't seen anything like her style - and that's saying quite a bit. We have as many art galleries as the Bible Belt has churches and Waffle Houses.

What are you waiting for?? Leave a comment, go on and enjoy some beautiful images while you enjoy your morning beverage, and maybe you'll win something pretty to hang on your wall above the computer that connects us all.

Okay, I just spent nearly half an hour browsing over there. What an incredible talent she is! With Each Other is my favorite. If it came in an art card, I'd buy her out!

Really really pretty! I have to honestly say I've never really seen art that is "touching" (I must not be classy enough!) but those paintings made me think of my own little one and I'm amazed at the emotion it

ABOUT ME

JEN M.

I have four children. I live in my car. I have a strange urge, about once every three years or so, to keep having more kids. I'm not a big fan of collectable figurines, kittens, or scrapbooking, yet I'm a Girl Scout Leader. Go figure. By the way, I feel that I should say this, much like lemon scented detergent has a warning not to consume their product, that I don't really LIVE in my car. It's just where I spend most of my day, shuttling one or more of the kids to doctor appointments, school, Girl Scouts, swim team, gymnastics, or church. I have a husband, and he's "one of the good guys." Just ask him. Confession: we don't go to church that often. We really, really mean to, but Sunday is when our piano teacher comes to teach the girls and frankly, it's a toss up. Not that we don't love God. We LOVE God. A lot. But I think God would be happy knowing the kids are learning to play Fur Elise. Need to rant? Contact me at getinthecar6@gmail.com
